As we began upon our high school ways,
Confused because the time slipped by on wings,
And awed by such a steady pace of things,
You stretched a hand to guide us past those days.

When problems met us on our journey through
The course that we had chosen for our own,
We sought your aid, and where we'd felt alone,
A friend was found, and life regained its hue.
More recently, as future plans were formed,
We found your patient work in our behalf
Guided us from our vacillating path,
'Till our hearts to patient service warmed.
For this, and more beyond our means to state,
This book to you with pride we dedicate.

GRADUATION SPEAKERS

CLASS DAY SPEAKERS

Time envelops us, lifting and hurling us headlong
Towards eternity, rushing relentlessly over
Our futile dreams, our former loves, our life-long
Hopes. The rampant tide crashes over
Our close-cabined sphere and sweeps tomorrow
To the moment, casts us at the brink to face
Perspective, to view our joy or future sorrow,
Success and life or death. Before us space
Extends to time; between an age we wait
And grasp at gay times, familiar faces, enduring
Memories the tide shall never inundate.
The past surrounds us, soothing, reassuring;
Beyond, the future lies obscure in vain
Conjecture; behind, the past, our joys remain.

Our thoughts traverse the transient high school years,
With reminiscent sadness contemplate;
A score of vivid memories appears,
As myriad echoes of the past relate
A tale of happy times. A football game--
Rough, rousing cheers--bold courage burning bright,
A special dance, a whispered name,
A touch of stardust silvering the night.
The friends who shared the toil of everyday,
The countless qualms before a final test,
The milestones that we passed along the way,
The weekends that lent life an extra zest
These will remain a lasting memory
Of friendships made and constant harmony.

W e now take space to praise our friends who make
Outstanding boy and girl for Junior year.
Aletheia and Harvard book pervade
Our thoughts and urge us on to further cheer

The ones who rate such honors as the First,
Achieved with E's, we know takes twenty-six.
For even twenty E's 'tis not the worst,
Your name to Second honors then affix.
A Horace Mann to those who did maintain
All super marks like ninety or above.
Though thousands tried in Merit their prize to gain
There's seven to whom we point with pride and love.
Hats off! to the one who won the D.A.R.
All these, our friends, with honors will go far.

W e did not always homeward turn at close
Of school, but often met in friendship when
The gavel sounded; when in stately pose
Her sacred scroll, with universal ken,

The laurel-crowned Muse of History
Did read; when gay or tragic words were voiced
In persiflage or wise soliloquy;
When pleasant Sport with victors strong rejoiced.
These clubs did serve a vital function here,
For columns twain support our edifice:
The first is Knowledge, firmly fixed; its peer
Cooperation, gained through clubs. It's this,
Our two-fold strength, which, though our paths divide,
We shall for e'er recall with rightful pride.

O ur halls resound with echoes of the strains
Of music, giv'n to bring us cheer by those
Who voiced in countless verses and refrains
The songs that to our minds brought sweet repose.

The sounds of Alma Mater marked our start
In quest of worlds of learning then unknown,
And music ever since has played its part;
The paths to fun and knowledge it has shown.
When our team won, the strains of Salatubie soared,
The shouts of joy were music to our ears.
From games of sport to life's fresh mold is poured
This buoyant spirit, vibrant through the years.
This world of ours would so much better be,
If from our music we learned harmony.

Victories, defeats, tales of a golden past
Return to mind when we consider leaving;
The honors won which rightly proved at last
Our strength to all those who were non-believing.

We hailed our triumphs, softened our defeats
With lasting hope and spirit for our school;
Through valiant players and their many feats,
In football and in track we came to rule.
In basketball and hockey's winter limelight,
We thrilled the fans with brilliant shots and plays;
In tennis's and in baseball's bright, spring sunlight,
We brought our class great praise in its last phase.
For constant spirit and determination,
Our many teams deserve great admiration.

But let us not forget our valiant girls,
Who dressed in blue and white, with constant cheer,
With fiery spirits, with dauntless hurls,
Made "Tigerettes" renowned both far and near.

From Junior Varsity so meek and mild,
To Senior Varsity in one Year's space;
From crowded stands came rousing cheers and wild,
To see the "Tigerettes" parade apace.
Their many feats in hockey won us fame,
To many vict'ries we can point with pride;
In other sports they won no less acclaim,
For even in defeat or when they tied
They ever showed their teams' fine sportsmanship
And basic qualities of leadership.

SNAAPS

As Sophomores first, we paced these hallowed spaces.
In searching for the "lift" we lost our way.
Of arrogant conceit we had no traces
As we watched our marks fall lower day by day.
When Juniors, we were really something swell:
We'd reached the stage of restful "in-between".
But how to sharpen pencils really well
When Fate had put us into Room Fifteen?
As Seniors, now in "sere and yellow leaf,"
Undaunted by our fears of College Boards,
We've run our race. We hold a firm belief
That we shall reap our great and just rewards.
And what has been the aim of hopes and fears?
That we may go to school for four more years!

Classic Talent

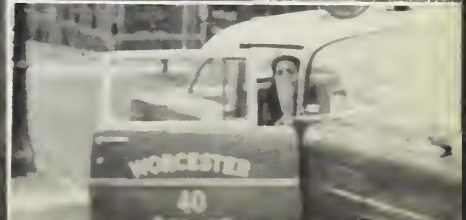

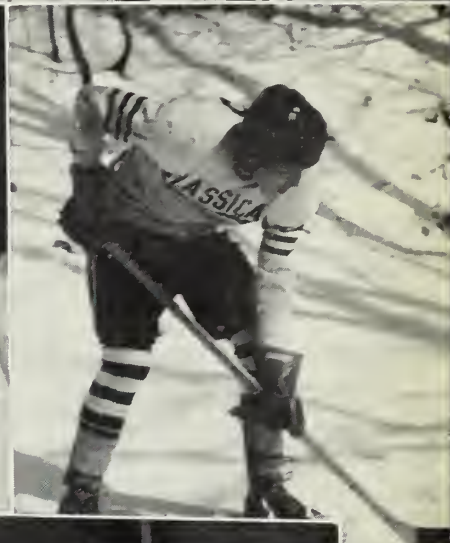

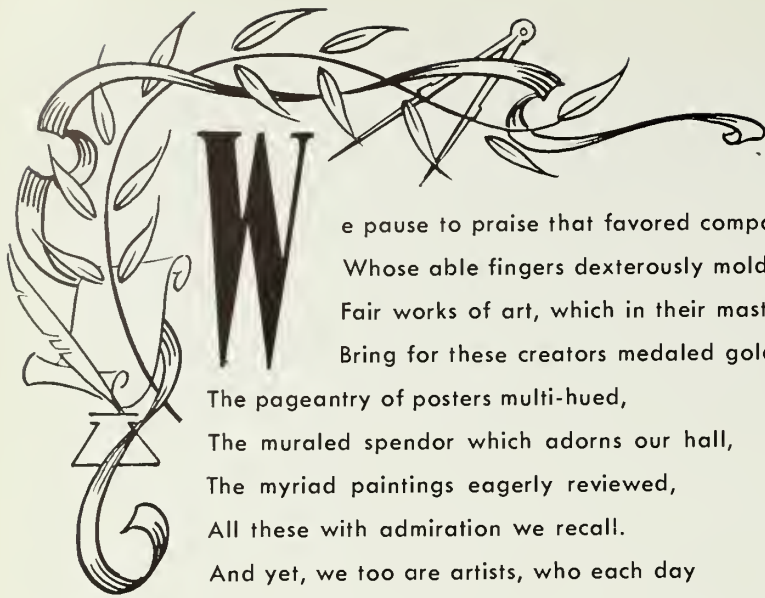

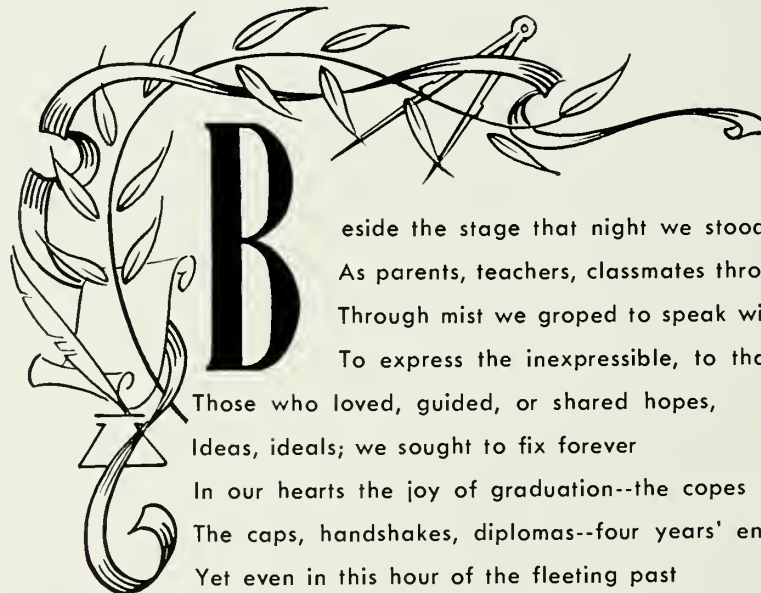

W e pause to praise that favored company
Whose able fingers dexterously mold
Fair works of art, which in their mastery
Bring for these creators medaled gold.

The pageantry of posters multi-hued,
The muraled spendor which adorns our hall,
The myriad paintings eagerly reviewed,
All these with admiration we recall.
And yet, we too are artists, who each day
Take in our youthful hands the brush of life,
And wield with willful strokes our own display
Of deeds well done or days of endless strife.
The choice is ours; as graduation nears
We stand prepared to paint our future years.

B eside the stage that night we stood distraught
As parents, teachers, classmates thronged the hall.
Through mist we groped to speak with them and sought
To express the inexpressible, to thank them all,

Those who loved, guided, or shared hopes,
Ideas, ideals; we sought to fix forever
In our hearts the joy of graduation--the copes
The caps, handshakes, diplomas--four years' endeavor.
Yet even in this hour of the fleeting past
There lurked the thought of change, of future strife,
Of altered faces, college, industry, but fast
There swelled the hope, the courage to meet life,
For these past years of laughter, toil, and tears
Have been but steps to later, gladsome years.
